

HOOVER REFUSES SECRET DATA ON NAVAL TREATY

Would Be Breach of Faith If Revealed at This Time,
He Says

SENATORS MAY PERUSE

No Secrets or Concealed Understanding or Commitments, He Advises

WASHINGTON, July 12.—President Hoover, in a brief message to the Senate yesterday, refused to submit the documents with relation to negotiation of the London Naval Treaty which were requested in the McKellar resolution.

The President declared that to comply with the resolution would be "incompatible with the public interest." He held that the President, in maintaining relations of amity with other nations, must not allow himself to become "guilty of a breach of trust" by betrayal of confidential information.

Calling attention that any Senator could see the confidential documents on agreeing to hold them in confidence, he insisted that the maintenance of this confidence was essential, at the same time asserting that there were no secrets or concealed understanding or commitments in connection with the pact.

The President's message was read to the Senate at 3.25 in the afternoon. It followed a visit by Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, to the Capitol earlier in the day to confer with Senator David A. Reed, Republican, of Pennsylvania, and Joseph T. Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas, who were members of the American Naval delegation. Mr. Stimson had previously conferred with President Hoover.

No sooner had the message been read than Senator George W. Norris, insurgent Republican of Nebraska, proposed a reservation to the treaty, the first one which has thus far been offered. It is to the effect that the Senate ratifies the treaty with the distinct understanding there are no secret agreements which in any way add to or take from the language of the treaty itself. The reservation recites that the Senate has asked for the documents relating to the negotiations and has been refused them.

President Hoover outlined the nature of the documents at a conference with news correspondents after his message rejecting the Senate's request had been read in that chamber. He confirmed previous indications that they represented the highly confidential opinions of officials of this and other governments with respect to various personalities and naval proposals.

Being confidential, the President made it clear that they contained names of individuals and governments concerned in the then projected conference which, it has been suggested during the Senate debate, might have little bearing on the treaty, but, if made public, could, like much other diplomatic correspondence, be the cause of considerable international embarrassment. Some of the documents, the President observed, contained reliable information and some did not.

At the same time, he discounted suggestions that they might contain some of the more celebrated parts of the vocabularies of Charles G. Dawes, the Ambassador at London, and Joseph P. Cotton, Under Secretary of State, which are always expressive, but not so frequently in conformity with the highly specialized usages of diplomacy. Publication of these documents, he pointed out, might result in the arousing of a public opinion abroad which would operate to block general acceptance of the treaty and, perhaps, be directed against Ambassador Dawes, who transmitted the pre-conference reports.

The reservation introduced by Senator Norris was said to be only one of a number which will be proposed before the controversy over the treaty is ended.

BUCKS COUNTY WILL BE NATIONALLY ADVERTISED

Real Estate Board and County
Bankers Have Enthusiastic
Session

ARE TO RAISE $25,000.00

DOYLESTOWN, July 12.—Bucks county will be nationally advertised by the Bucks County Real Estate Board and Bucks county bankers according to the president of the real estate association, J. Carroll Molloy.

At a meeting of the Board Thursday night at the Fountain House it was evident that although the Board is just several months old, it is beginning to function 100 per cent.

Plans are under way to raise a fund of $25,000 for the purpose of carrying out the national advertising of the county that will result in increased prosperity within its borders and place the county among the leaders of the entire country for industrial sites, home sites and country estate.

That no other county in the United States has the attractions that are right here in Bucks County, is the firm belief of every member of the Bucks County Real Estate Board. Although no definite plan has been adopted for the national advertising campaign, a committee is busy at the present time investigating and formulating details for the campaign.

An inspiring talk on the advantages of Bucks county was given at the meeting by Thomas B. Stockham, of Morrisville. He particularly stressed the advantages of having both industrial sites of a desirable nature, pretty home towns and many fine country estates, together with fine farm land and unsurpassable scenery.

J. Carroll Molloy called attention to the fact that Bucks County is the center of a population of 18,000,000 people, taking a radius of 100 miles of the county.

Various members of the Board expressed a real spirit of optimism concerning the real estate business. They feel that the bottom of the depression has been reached and that business is now on the upward trend. Reports from every section of Bucks County indicate that.

The appointment of an appraisal committee was announced last night. This committee is for the purpose of placing real values on properties and is for the service of residents of the county. This will in a large way do away with the placing of fictitious values on real estate. Members of the (Continued on Page 4)

FEDERALS HAVE EASY TIME WITH EMILIE

Batter Way to Victory and Capture Contest by Score of 10 to 4

EMILIE'S MANY ERRORS

Schedule For Tomorrow
INDEPENDENT'S vs. CROYDON
Result of Last Night
Federals, 10; Emilie, 4

By T. M. Juno
Undismayed by President Landreth's decision which cost them a game to the St. Ann's team, the Federals went out last night and battered their way to a 10-4 victory over the Emilie team on St. Ann's field.

The game was marred by the Emilie infield making entirely too many errors. In all ten errors were charged to the team, the worst exhibition of the Farmers this season. D. Still had four misuses after his name; Moran had one; T. Prall had two; Bruce, one; Stallone and Carp, one.

The Federals taking good advantage of these misplays, mixed them up with hits in the first two innings and nine runs crossed the plate. The Federals made but eight hits.

Overshadowing all the misuses of the infield was a brilliant catch by B. Prall, of the losing team. In the second inning, after four men had already crossed the plate and two situated on second and third, respectively, Fine sent what appeared to be a sure hit to right center. B. Prall, playing second base at the time, raced after the ball and by sticking up his gloved mitt caught the ball and robbed the batter of a hit.

Wilkinson and Cochrane with two hits apiece led the hitter of the Federals' team. Watson had two out of three, one a double to lead the Emilieites in batting.

Five runs were chalked up for the Federals in the first. Cooper reached base on Prall's error; Cochrane singled to left; Barrett grounded out; Cooper holding third; Dugan was hit with a pitched ball, filling the sacks; Wilkinson hit to D. Still who errored, scoring Cooper and Cochrane; DeRisi singled to left and Dugan scored; Fine fouled out to T. Prall; White singled to left, scoring Wilkinson and DeRisi, but was out trying for third, Moran to T. Prall.

Emilie retaliated with four in its turn. D. Still fanned; Watson shot a hit to center; F. Still and Stallone drew passes; Carp singled to center and Watson and Still scored; Moran was passed and forced at second by B. Prall; T. Prall singled to left, scoring Stallone and Carp, but B. Prall was out when he overran second base, Barrett to Cochrane.

The Federals counted four more in their second. Brooks got a hit to center; Cooper forced Brooks, T. Prall to Stallone; Cooper stole second and third and scored on Moran's wild peg; Cochrane reached first on Still's error; Barrett doubled to center, counting Cochrane; Dugan doubled to center and Barrett scored; Wilkinson skied to F. Still; DeRisi hit to T. Prall, who errored, scoring Dugan; Fine's fly was caught by B. Prall.

The last run of the battle was scored in the Federals' fourth. With Dugan out, Wilkinson singled over third base; DeRisi forced Wilkinson, Still to Stallone; Stallone in attempting a double-play threw wild to first enabling the runner to reach second; Fine hit to Bruce who let the ball go through his legs, scoring DeRisi; Laferty hit to Still who again missed the ball; Still finally caught Brooks' fly.

The fourteenth anniversary of the P. O. of A. Lodge was celebrated last evening with a banquet held at the Keystone dining room at Bath and Otter streets.

The room was decorated with flags and flowers. Favors were small American flags on stands and balloons.

As the members stood at their respective places at the table, prayer was offered by Mrs. Minnie Britton, followed by singing, "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

Mrs. Warren Thompson was toast-mistress of the evening and she made an address of welcome to their district president, Mrs. Naomi Foster and also presented her with a box of candy.

A few remarks were made by some of the members, after which Brother Thompson was presented with $5 in appreciation for the many courtesies extended to the ladies. Mrs. Thompson was presented with a beautiful bouquet of gladioli. During the banquet, the members sang many songs and just before departing for their homes they sang "Auld Lang Syne."

HERE AND THERE IN TOWNS OF COUNTY

Doylestown Likely to Widen
Main Street by Cutting Two Feet Off the Sidewalks

OTHER NEWS NOTES

DOYLESTOWN, July 12.—If action is taken promptly, it is said, there is an excellent chance of having Main street widened two feet on the west side between State street and Oakland avenue. Owners of all except one property, it is reported, have been seen and have expressed a willingness to permit the borough to widen the street to that extent.

Borough Councilmen have been consulted and it is expected that action will be taken soon.

About a year ago it was reported that owners on the opposite side, the east side, were also willing to give that much of their side walks for the same purpose.

If the street was widened to this extent, it is said, it would be possible to have cars parked on both sides of the street and traffic both ways in spite of the trolleys.

In a short time the sidewalk between Main street and Printers' Lane on Court street will be widened in that way. Earlier it would have been possible to have that extension continued to Pine street. It is said that the permission of one owner is all that is needed now to make that improvement possible.

But one stipulation is made by the property owners. That is that the change shall be made without expense to them for replacing curbing and changing pole lines.

Before the Main street change can be made, it is said, the approval of the State will be required.

CHURCHVILLE, July 10.—Children and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Charles George, Sr., helped them celebrate their 45th wedding anniversary at their home below Churchville on Friday, July 4th. A picnic supper was served on the lawn.

ROOSEVELT TRAIL VERY PICTURESQUE ROUTE

Northern Tier Counties of Pennsylvania Attractive
For Motorists

MAJESTIC MT. RANGES

Reaching along the northern tier counties of Pennsylvania is the Roosevelt Trail, one of the most picturesque of all the main trunk motor roadways in the east. Over this well paved highway the Keystone Automobile Club has mapped a tour that will furnish motorists with an ideal vacation journey.

"Through majestic mountain ranges, along the shores of sparkling lakes and amid sections noted for their scenic and historic interest the Roosevelt Trail leads to the Lake Erie shore, one of the most delightful vacation havens in all Pennsylvania," says Russell B. Carty, representative of the club.

From Bristol follow route 113 and 122 to Doylestown. From there the route leads north in national route 651 to Easton where state route 12 is followed through Wind Gap, Saylorsburg and Snyder'sville to Bartonsville. Here national route 611 is again met and used northward through the scenic Pocono regions to Scranton. Northward the highway leads to Clark Summit where a left turn carries the tourists into the Roosevelt Highway marked as national route 6.

Winding along the banks of the north branch of the beautiful Susquehanna River, the highway passes through Skippers Eddy and Wyalusing to Towanda. At North Towanda a left turn leads through Troy to Mansfield, where another left turn carries the tourists into Covington. Westward the journey continues through natural rugged sections of Tioga and Potter counties to Coudersport.

Four miles west of this town can be seen one of the greatest freaks of nature, the only "Ice Mine" in the world. Located in the side of a mountain is a deep cavity in which ice forms only in the Summer and melts and wastes away in Winter. From Coudersport the travelers drive through the famous Black Forest region, a paradise for bear hunters and a section rich in its natural unspoiled rugged loveliness.

Through Port Allegany and Farmers Valley the tour reaches Kane, noted for its vast glass making industries. From this point the journey winds through Allegheny National Forest Park, one of the largest forest preserves maintained by the federal government in eastern United States. From the next town of Warren, numerous side trips can be made into delightful scenic regions including the famous Cornplanter Indian reservation. Through Youngsville the tour leads to Corry in the heart of an old oil producing section. Eighteen miles from Corry is Panama Rocks, one of the scenic wonders of Pennsylvania.

Westward the tour continues through Waterford to Erie. This city founded by the French as Presque Isle in 1795, is the center of much historic interest. It was here that Commodore Perry built the fleet with which he won the Battle of Lake Erie in the War of 1812. His old flagship, "Niagara," is anchored here. Here, too, stands a replica of the block house built by "Mad" Anthony Wayne. For twenty miles in either direction from Erie along the lake shore are scores of attractive resorts and beaches. Less than twenty-five miles northward in New York state lies beautiful Chautauque Lake. South of Erie the famous mineral springs district of Pennsylvania can be reached. In almost any direction from Erie excellent highways lead to attractive places that make the entire tour a most enjoyable one. On the homeward journey the famous Lakes-to-the-Sea Highway, marked as national routes 322 and 22 can be used back into the Susquehanna Valley in central Pennsylvania.

Mrs. G. Greco and daughter, Pauline, of Jefferson avenue, spent several days visiting Mrs. Greco's nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. John Ferraro, of Philadelphia.

REAL EVIL OF GAMBLING

"Gambling," says Sir Walter Scott, in the introduction to "St. Roman's Well," is "a vice which the devil has contrived to render all his own, since it is deprived of whatever pleads an apology for other vices, and is founded entirely on the cold-blooded calculation of the most exclusive selfishness."

The prevalence of the vice calls for some straight thinking concerning its iniquity. Too many persons, including both "society" women who play bridge and street urchins who roll dice in back alleys, do not consider gambling inherently wrong. Their attitude is that it is only to be condemned if one's losses are so great as to be embarrassing or cause those dependent upon the gambler to suffer. One often hears them say that they look upon their losses as no more than a reasonable outlay for the entertainment that they get from the game. Then, too, they are in the habit of saying loosely that all life is a gamble, that everyone is constantly taking hazards.

They ignore the fundamental fact that gambling at dice and cards is immoral because it is an attempt to win money by making somebody else lose it. There is no way for the gambler to profit except by causing his opponent to suffer.

This is the crux of the matter and must be emphasized if people are to be made to believe that gambling is an evil in itself, independently of whether one can afford to lose. Can one afford to win, or try to win, at the expense of another, should rather be asked.

THE IDLE WORD

The idle word that stings is as old as human speech. Spoken thoughtlessly or spoken in a moment of irritation, it says more than the speaker meant. At least it says more than he would have said if he had taken second thought. Too often in a hasty moment one who really would not for worlds cause lasting hurt does just that because he reaches for the first remark that will register.

These idle words go deep, deep into the heart and memory of the one to whom they are addressed. There is no way of reaching this harm by laws and courts. There is no way of resolving that one will never say the thing that causes needless hurt, except by resolving to build up a habit in one's life of saying only kindly things until quiet reflection has shown the need of something else.

This is not a text for weaklings, a counsel of meekness to the point of being trodden upon. It was not a weak man who prayed, "Set a watch before the door of my lips," nor a fool who wrote, "She openeth her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness."

SYNOPSIS

Fair-skinned Dawn, mystery girl, becomes the bride, against her wishes, of the black god Malungu. Her sweetheart, Tom Allen, has been transported to England, on the invitation of Shep Keyes, whip-wielding bully with influence over the blacks. Shep's purpose is to have the field clear for his sinister designs on Dawn. Over her he holds the whip of native vengeance should the fact that she is white be divulged. Tom is with the British who recapture the East African territory from the Germans. The natives supplicate the British to end the drought; then, balked, they turn on Dawn and plan to burn her, for not being able to bring rain, as their goddess.

INSTALLMENT TWENTY-SEVEN

When Eric had left, Colonel Judson admitted an orderly. For several seconds he paced the floor while the visitor stood at attention. The commander appeared to be having extreme difficulty arriving at a decision. Suddenly he turned to the waiting orderly.

"My orders to your captain," he said decisively, "are that he shall locate this place they call the Hill of Skulls and cover it with a guard. He is not to permit any natives to come within one hundred yards of the place. We are to have no human sacrifices."

The orderly saluted and departed to deliver the order.

Colonel Judson had made up his mind that Captain Eric had given him excellent advice, that the one certain way of preserving peace was to impress the severest possible discipline on the natives. He was resolved that if actually pressed, blacks and also despite their overwhelming numbers of the blacks and also despite their desperate plight.

Meantime, Eric had wandered off to the canteen to help with the assembling of the luggage of the exchanged prisoners. He found Pigeon in charge, that blithely cockney singing of the joys which, in the words of his song, he would be a long time in knowing again. He greeted Eric briefly.

"I 'opes we get these 'ere German supplies checked up before noon," he added. "It's goin' to be hotter'n 'ell by that time."

Eric agreed. "Still, it'll be hotter in Berlin for me," he said sadly. Pigeon's amazement was matched only by his disgust. He stared at Eric in silence for several seconds, and then exploded.

"It beats me," he ejaculated, "why everybody that gets sent 'ome comes around 'ere weeping about it. Now take me, what wouldn't I give to go 'ome? And what happens. First, they send a bunch o' undeservin' blighters, and then the British capture the post so we'll never get away. You're lucky, Captain."

"Don't worry," spoke up Blink. "Say, if any of them high officers back there want to know what you were up against down here, all they have to do is to come down for themselves."

"There are few serviceable alibis in the German army," said Eric, smiling.

"Yeah," observed Pigeon. "Well, Captain, with respect to you there'll be plenty before this 'ere war is over."

"I'm afraid so," sighed Eric. "And then you'll probably come back here—after the war is over, just like Tom Allen," offered Blink.

"Yes, I remember Tom announcing that he was coming back," said Eric.

"I've got a hunch Tom'll blow in here any day," said Blink sagely. "In fact it's more than a hunch. I've got some pretty good suspicions."

"You know, Shep's been hangin' around the canteen all the time the past few days, acting pretty sore."

"Aw, that's because the Colonel threatened to arrest 'im for wearing the uniform of the Askari guard," scoffed Pigeon.

"It isn't that," insisted Blink. "Now, Johanna knows all these native tricks, and she knows Shep Keyes' mind that ain't Dawn is Tom Allen."

"There's plenty of submarines Tom's got to get through before he gets back 'ere," declared Pigeon.

"If he's the same obstinate Britisher he used to be, he'll get through them," laughed Eric.

At that moment, in accordance with the best melodramatic traditions and perhaps also to support his reputed obstinacy and Blink's hunch, Tom appeared on the trail approaching the canteen.

"By the bloomen sword of Nelson," gasped the amazed Pigeon, the first to see him.

Tom raised a whoop of delight and ran toward his three companions. There was a noisy exchange of greetings, dozens of unanswered questions and the general confusion of a reunion. It was then noticed that Tom was wearing the uniform of a captain of British infantry.

"Oh, yes," he explained, "I've been off to the war. It's lots of fun. I'm on my first leave now and here I am."

"I am going away," said Eric. "Serves you right," rejoined Tom. "You exchanged me when I didn't want to go and now you're shipping you back to Germany—and you don't want to go?"

Eric laughed. "Very true," he admitted, "but you had something to bring you back."

"Yes," Tom agreed, "I've come back for Dawn."

All hesitated to apprise him at once of Dawn's danger. And afterward? queried Eric.

Tom's gesture confessed his lack of plans. "Quiet as a mouse," he quoted. "Who can tell? If this war goes on we might meet, you and I, somewhere in Flanders."

"God forbid!" Eric's tone was fervent. In his casual inspection of the canteen Tom remarked the absence of the native guards, now all replaced by Englishmen. He felt genuinely sorry, that is, as a British captain of infantry is able to feel for an absence of his nation's enemy.

"Perhaps now, Eric," he asked, as he and the German seated themselves at a table on the veranda, "you are able to understand my deep reluctance to part from here."

"Fully," admitted Eric. "And you know, Tom, I've regretted times over, my haste in believing that black monster's word over yours that day. But perhaps it is all for the best. Here you are—in a position to perform a real service for Dawn."

"Is Dawn in need of help," Tom asked quickly, fearful of Eric's answer.

The duty of apprising Tom of Dawn's real peril was too great for Eric to undertake. It was cowardly, he knew to keep this eager lover in ignorance, but he couldn't force himself to destroy Tom's joy with disastrous tidings.

"Why, Tom," he boomed dismally, "certainly you know that Dawn is now the goddess Thabu, the idol of the natives. What could happen to her to make her need help?"

"Unless things have changed considerably since my departure, she will always need help while Shep Keyes before this settlement with his presence," Tom remarked grimly. "By the way, what has happened to Shep?"

Grateful that the change of topic had spared him from further discussion of Dawn, Eric smiled in relief. "Oh, Shep," he echoed. "Oh, you'll be delighted to know that he's been sent back into the bush with the rest of the blacks. He has been stripped of his power."

"Whip and all?" asked Tom, grinning.

"He's even lost his medals," laughed Eric. "He's the meekest native you ever saw. The kids even taunt him. You have nothing to fear. He's harmless."

But one man who heard these words of Eric's disagreed with them. That man was Shep himself, within easy earshot in the foliage. He scowled darkly at Eric's jovial belittlement of his prowess.

"Harmless is it?" he muttered to himself. "You am goin' to learn different, Captain Eric, and you, too, Captain Allen."

At the first opportunity, Shep hurried to Colonel Judson's quarters. With the humility he had acquired by his demotion to the jungle, he communicated to the orderly a desire to see the commander. Judson, who detested Shep, hesitated to see him, but upon second thought decided it would be well to advise the trouble-maker that the British military intended to prevent the sacrifice of Dawn.

A Charming House with English Lines

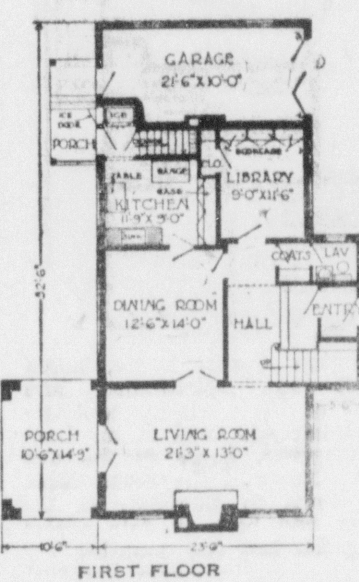

House No. 725

THE English type of house has, in recent years, been enjoying an increasing popularity among home-builders. And deservedly so, for it presents an interesting exterior and makes possible an attractive arrangement of rooms.

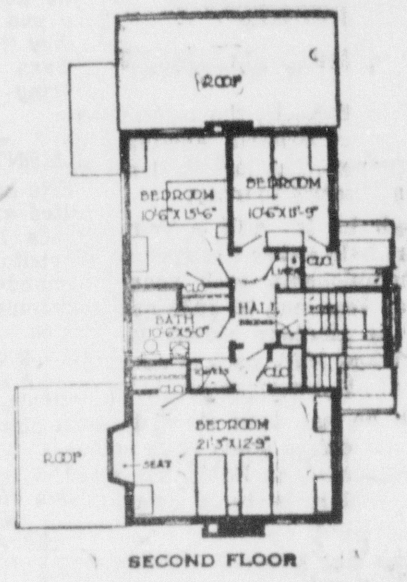

The unique gabled front of this design at once sets the house off from its neighbors. The classic entrance, painted white, cream or ivory, is a mark of distinction that brings out the varied beauty of the brickwork.

Face brick is used with colorful effect in the exterior walls, and with its beauty brings permanence and fire safety so necessary in today's homes. The wide range of colors and textures available in this material make it easy for the home builder to select the colors that best harmonize with the site. Care should be given to the selection of color for the mortar joint as these joints serve not only to bind the brick together but to accentuate their color.

The living room extends across the end of the house and opens to a porch at the rear. The dining room is located directly back of the hall to which it opens as well as to the living room. The kitchen is well lighted by two large windows alongside the sink. A large cabinet occupies the entire rear wall. The ice box is placed in the entry, with an outside ice door, and has a cabinet above. The basement stair descends here.

FIRST FLOOR

SECOND FLOOR

On the back porch is a convenient entrance to the connected garage.

On the second floor are three spacious corner bedrooms, with ample closets, and a large bathroom with towel closet. In the hallway, closets are provided for linens and brooms.

For the physician, contractor, or others who wish an office or study at home, this plan, arranged with an extra room downstairs, should make an appeal. For the library, as on the plan, while in itself an attractive addition to any house, may be converted to the uses suggested. Or, as it has a closet and is adjacent to the lavatory, it can be used as an emergency bedroom in case of illness.

There is a full basement, except under the garage and porch. This contains the usual boiler and coal rooms, laundry, vegetable cellar, etc. The basement windows are all above ground, making an unusually light cellar. The ceiling height of both stories is 8 feet 6 inches. The content of the house is 33,000 cubic feet; garage 3,200 cubic feet.

If you are interested in working drawings for House No. 725, the editor of this paper will gladly tell you where they may be obtained.

Young Atlantan Lawyer Seeks World's Golf Crown

American Open Championship Crown Now Remains Sole Honor in Golfdom for Bobby Jones.

NEW YORK WELCOMES CHAMPION. — JONES IN ACTION.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 11.—Fresh from his amazing triumphs abroad, Bobby Jones, that chubby-faced Napoleon of the links, is here to make a bid for the American open championship.

Not content with lifting every golfing crown in Great Britain, the brilliant Atlantan—hailed the world over as the greatest golf-club wielder of all time—has hastened here to prove his supremacy over all comers.

Met by a welcoming delegation of local sportsmen and city officials, Jones greeted his hosts with the same modesty and youthful charm that has made him the idol of athletic enthusiasts the world over. The famous tournament started July 19.

Bobby Jones is the third Georgian to become an outstanding figure in the sphere of sport. Ty Cobb, that king of the diamond, was the first native of Georgia, to carve a niche for himself in the athletic hall of fame. Young Stribling, the brilliant heavyweight boxer, completes the trio.

Robert Tyre Jones, 24, is the first man in golfing history to hold three major links titles at the same time—British open, British amateur and American open. The last of these was won in last year's tourney.

Although he is still a youngster, Bobby has held either the open or amateur championship each year since 1923. That year and in 1926 and 1929 he won the amateur crown. In 1924, 1925, 1927 and 1928, he was acclaimed the peer of all American rivals.

Though he has been flooded with professional offers since first achieving golfing eminence, Bobby has steadfastly refused to be lured away from the "simon-pure" ranks.

Although not wealthy in his own right, Jones makes a comfortable living as a lawyer.

A vast change has come over the Georgian since his boyhood victories. He was given to fits of temperament but today he has quieted down and devotes himself during matches in concentrating on his unbeatable brand of golf. He wins by playing the golf course instead of his opponent.

Although if he wins the coming tournament there will remain no golfing worlds for him to conquer, Jones declares that he will not retire from competition. Bobby loves the game too much to quit while at the peak of his sensational career.

Among the link aces Jones will compete against in the impending matches are Horton Smith, Leo Diegel and "Wild Bill" Mehlgorn.

Death Takes Creator of Sherlock Holmes

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, noted novelist and spiritualist, and creator of the world-famed Sherlock Holmes, is dead at his London, England, home at the age of 71. News of the death came as a shock to England, as the novelist had been in fair health during the last few months.

QUESTIONING MR. ATTERBURY

To the Editor of the Public Ledger:

Sir—Do we understand the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad to say that, contrary to public belief, total abstinence is not required from the company's employees except when on duty and that at all other times they have the personal liberty enjoyed by the president himself of drinking whatever alcoholic beverage they may prefer? If this be the case, how much time must elapse between the last drink and the resumption of duty? Must it be several hours or several minutes? The answer is of vast importance in the light of the testimony before Congress of Mr. Bennet, vice-president of three railway companies. He said it will be remembered that his companies require total abstinence from their employees for the reason that the effects of alcohol last and that a man may be "socially sober though mechanically drunk."
